GRAIN BAGS

Four Million Sacks Will Be Used in the Pacific Northwest

Have you any old grain bags at your house?

If you have, you had better patch them and take them to the dealer. They are worth money.

All the small boys in Salem can make a considerable amount of money by gathering up the old grain bags around the house and putting them on the market for the Willamette valley wheat.

Bags are now selling at 9 1/2 cents each and there is no prospect for a decline. The cause of the present high prices is said to be a raise in the price of raw jute in the market. Calcutta, the leading market for jute in the world. There is a bare chance that the shortage will not interfere with the handling of the crop, but it will cost the farmers considerably more to sack their grain this season than it has for several years, as the price of bags is 1 1/2 cents higher than a year ago.

On an estimate of 44,000,000 bags to be used, this means that the farmers of the Pacific northwest will have to pay to the bag manufacturers between $750,000 and $1,000,000 more than they did a year ago. This increase, the bag manufacturers declare, is due to the Calcutta market, a center for jute, as the price in that market for jute is higher today than 25 to 40 per cent than it has been in the past 40 years.

No Objections to Oil Roads.

Diligent inquiries about the effect of oil on rubber tires fails to disclose any complaints, except in case where the tire has come in direct contact with the oil. Rather it is claimed that the resiliency of an oiled road surface and the protection against the sharp edges of sand and gravel increases the life of the rubber tire very materially.

For a short time after oil is applied there is a very perceptible odor which soon disappears entirely. While it lasts it is not essentially disagreeable and many people rather like it. Another incidental advantage of oil roads is the help to the eyes. Oiling gives the road a seal of brown color which is much easier on the eyes than the harsh reflection of the sun from white road surfaces and the oil road also eliminates the dust.

SLEEP IN HAY COCKS

Marion County Farmers Not Hospitable to Mormon Elders

The farmers of Marion county do not take very kindly to the band of six young Mormon elders, who are travelling without purse, or script, teaching the doctrine of Joseph Smith, to the Gentile in these parts.

Although the young elders are not destitute, and have money to pay for food and lodging, they do not always get these commodities when they ask for them, and last week, while carrying the gospel out in the county, they also carried the banner on several occasions.

"Skiddo," said the farmer, when they asked for accommodations. Six young men from Utah, southern Idaho and Wyoming are in Marion county now defending the faith of their fathers. They are Harry Bliton, W. H. Anderson, Daniel Ricks, W. H. Kinnington, Earl Balls and James L. Lindsey. All of them are college men, and are well educated, well behaved, well appearing and intelligent young men.

The belong to what is termed the Northwest mission and report to headquarters in Seattle and Portland.

There are a great many Mormons in Oregon, most of them in Baker, Wasco and Union counties, where a division of the church called a Stake is maintained. For the Stake of Union a splendid tabernacle has been built in LaGrande, and in each of a number of subdivisions of this Stake are commodious meeting houses. Union and Baker counties are no longer under the auspices of the mission, but are organized as integral parts of the church, and are self-sustaining. With two or three millionaires in the fold they should be. The Mormon church maintains about 2000 missionaries in the field all the time. Any intelligent young Mormon of good moral character, is liable to mission duty, and when called, he generally goes and furthermore, he pays his own expense, or the family pays it for him. The church will stand for the price of a return ticket and a free copy of the "Deseret News" and that's about all.

The young Mormon missionaries are aggressive. They are all the time telling of the restoration of the true gospel by the prophet, Joseph Smith, who found a book of golden plates under a rock, somewhere in New York state, which he translated by means of a seer stone. This was the book of Mormon. Joseph did not stop at that but continued to have relations from the Almighty. He was succeeded by Brigham Young, who also had revelations. It is part of the faith that the president of the church gets direct revelations from on high at any and all times when needed. A good Mormon must believe that Joseph Smith gets revelations from God, and he teaches it. Joseph P. in his testimony in the Smoot case in Washington, admitted that he had never had any direct conversation with the Lord, but a good Mormon must believe that he did all right anyway.

The mission system is the strongest thing in the Mormon church, and it is today, the one thing that is holding it together. They make but comparatively few converts in the United States, but the fact that 2000 of their best and brightest young men are thrown on the world to defend the faith, every year, and then come back to Deseret, bigger, better and broader men, is the one thing that solidifies Zion.

The young elders preach a pretty theology that is lived up to by its adherents in all things, except in the matter of polygamy. The laws of the land and a very convenient revelation from God to the prophet has stopped that. And now a young Mormon manages to skirminish along as best he can, with only one partner for his joys and sorrows.

The Pampas of Argentina.

The pampas of Argentina correspond very closely to the Mississippi valley of the United States and the great plains of the Canadian Northwest, but on a showdown they would prove far truer to the name of plains than anything we have north of the Isthmus of Panama. Nowhere else in the world is there so large an area that approaches so near an absolute level, as do the pampas. The exigencies of railroad building best illustrate this fact. Look at a railroad map of Argentina and see how the lines radiate from Buenos Ayres like the spokes of a wheel. Whether northwest to Rosario and Cordoba, west to the Andes, southwest to the Pampa Central or south to Mar del Plata and Bahia Blanca their courses are invariably almost perfectly direct. The Buenos Ayres and Pacific railway has the longest "straight" in the world, where, between Vedia and Mackenna, in the heart of the pampas, the rails run 175 miles without an inch of curve, and but for an 8 at the former place would continue so for 206 miles.—New York Sun.
